JFK, Macmillan Agree Crisis Must End

Two Rescued From Mt. Minsi Cliff Jersey Youths Trapped On Narrow Ledge 6 Hrs.

By JAMES D. SHAFER
DELAWARE WATER GAP—Bob Hartman, 17, an Explorer Scout from Mapletown, N. J., who tried to take a short cut down the side of Mount Minsi yesterday became stuck on a ledge about 75 feet above the ground at the base of the cliff and was stranded for nearly six hours before being rescued.

He was one of six boys, all from Mapletown, who started out yesterday at 10:45 a.m. at Wind Gap to hike the Appalachian Trail from there to Delaware Water Gap. Three arrived in the Gap about 4:30 p.m.

The boys in the party were Bob Blagden, 17, Tom McEntee, 18, Ralph Young, 17, Jim Helman, 24, and Halsey Stickle, 17.

Near the fire tower on top of Mount Minsi, Stickle, Hartman and Young, who had fallen behind in the hike, decided to take a short cut down the side of the mountain to join the other members who had gone ahead and down the trail, coming out on Route 611 near Delaware Water Gap.

Blagden, McEntee and Helman walked south to where they would meet the other three but arrived to find Hartman stuck on a ledge. The boys sent McEntee to Portland to summon aid. Blagden made his way back up the side of the steep mountainside and lowered Hartman to another ledge. It was at this point that they both became stranded.

They came upon "rotten rock," a rock that water had seeped into and frozen causing the rock to crumble. They still retained their heads and remained there for help to come. Members of the Portland and Mount Bethel Fire Companies, rescue teams from the companies and the Portland Ambulance Corps went into action.

A radio base was established on the highway and walkie-talkies were dispatched up the mountain side. The rescue team went around via Tott's Gap to the fire tower on top of the mountain and lowered 200 feet of rope to the two boys.

Contact could not be established between the base station and portable radios but was established by a third party. Fire Chief Clarence Strunk of East Stroudsburg, who was traveling to East Stroudsburg from New Jersey and heard the voices on the radio in his car.

He pulled to the side of the highway, on the New Jersey side of the Delaware Water Gap, and began relaying the messages to and from the portables and the base station.

One of the rescuers said after the boys were safe in the Portland Fire House: "Man, am I glad to meet you; without you it would have been a complete flop. We would have had to call back and forth to relay the messages up and down the mountain side."

After calling their homes from the fire house to notify their parents that they were down off the mountain, safe without injuries, the boys talked freely. McEntee said, "This is the seventh time we have made this hike and each time something went wrong, but nothing like this time. Other times were minor accidents, like cuts and bruises from a fall along the trail."

All seemed in very good spirits and none the worse for the ordeal.

Another local man fitting into the rescue picture was Pete Henning, a student at East Stroudsburg State College, who climbed to the base of the cliff to assist in the rescue.

When the men on top of the mountain lowered the 200 feet of rope and the stranded boys made their way down the rope, hand over hand, Blagden became snagged by a branch of a tree.

Henning climbed the rope and told Blagden what to do to free himself and then after he was down Henning came down.

With over 1,000 people watching from cars parked along the road and standing around the fire trucks the rescue was made and the two boys came down the mountain where they were placed in the Portland Ambulance and taken to the fire house for a check by a doctor to see if they had suffered from exposure.

The people witnessing the rescue were as glad as the two boys taken from the ledge that the whole thing was over. The temperature along the road was in the mid-thirties and a cold air blew along the road off the Delaware River.

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP)—Fighting subsided in Laos Sunday as political leaders took up the Communist challenge to this Southeast Asian kingdom on the diplomatic front.

The general feeling here is that there will be no major military action in Laos during this week's conference of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization in Bangkok, Thailand, or at least until the Soviet Union replies to a proposal for a cease-fire and revival of the international control commission in Laos.

This would follow the classic Communist tactic of combining military and diplomatic action. Pro-Communist rebel troops had been reported advancing steadily

Mexican Picks Wrong Store

MEXICO CITY (AP)—A man broke into a store here the other night and almost lost his mind, police said, when deafening sirens began to wail and blinding lights began to flash. Ramon Mirabete, 26, was almost in a state of shock when arrested on a charge of attempted burglary. Police said the store he picked at random sells burglar alarm systems.

A total of 400,000 U. S. servicemen, 3,400 planes and 400 ships were reported "on the ready" in the Pacific. Movements were observed at air bases on the West Coast of the United States. Long convoys of trucks were seen heading toward the Pearl Harbor Naval base in Hawaii.

If No Cease-Fire By Wednesday

U.S. Ready To Endorse Entry Of SEATO Troops

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP)—The United States is reported ready to endorse the entry of troops and weapons from the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization into embattled Laos if the Soviet Union refuses to agree to a cease-fire there by Wednesday.

That is the day before the closing of the SEATO foreign ministers' meeting, which opens here Monday to examine the urgent situation in neighboring Laos.

Pro-Communist Pathet Lao rebels, aided by Soviet weapons and Communist advisers, are threatening to seize control of the pro-Western government of Laos.

The fighting has touched off a major crisis of diplomatic maneuver between Washington and Moscow, with President Kennedy demanding that Laos be left alone to adopt a neutral course in world affairs. With the SEATO meeting set to start, the battle in Laos died down. No Communist moves were reported Sunday.

SEATO intervention in Laos would be on the condition of an appeal from the government of Premier Prince Boun Oum in Laos. His country is not a SEATO member but has been placed under protection of the alliance's members—the United States, Britain, France, Pakistan, Thailand, the Philippines, Australia and New Zealand.

Diplomatic informants who reported the U. S. armistice-or-fight plans said massive military help for Laos is not being considered at the start.

They said it would be on a moderate scale at the beginning but based on the possibility of an all-out fight later if necessary to restore the independence of the jungle kingdom now menaced by the Communists.

This week's council meeting is expected to be a difficult one because of the varying involvement and political philosophies of the eight SEATO nations. It is by no means certain that if the United States decides SEATO must fight in Laos it can then obtain unanimous support of the plan from the alliance's eight members.

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Pope John XXIII blessed the palms and led a procession at Palm Sunday services in St. Peter's Basilica crowded by tens of thousands of Romans and tourists.

The ceremony commemorated Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem when the multitude strewn palm branches along his path. It marked the start of Holy Week observances.

The 73-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church was carried on his portable throne to a throne in the basilica. Then his chaplain, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Canisio Van Lierde, presented the pontiff with a huge pile of 180 palm branches. Pope John blessed the palms and personally distributed them among 18 cardinals, scores of archbishops and bishops and other church dignitaries attending the celebration.

Afterward, the pontiff, carrying a palm, was borne on his portable throne at the head of the procession inside the basilica and through the open court facing St. Peter's Square. A crowd of nearly 50,000 Romans and tourists—many of them pilgrims who have started pouring into Rome for Easter—applauded.

It was the first time since 1870 that a pope attended this ceremony in St. Peter's. Previously, Pope John presided at Palm Sunday services in the Basilica of St. Paul Outside the Walls. St. Peter's—the world's biggest church—was chosen this year to provide room for the thousands of tourists and pilgrims.

WASHINGTON (AP)—Battle casualties in Laos' defensive war apparently have been light up to now, compared with the reported scale of military operations.

Information received here indicates that the casualty rate for the Laos government forces has been averaging up a dozen a day—including missing and wounded as well as killed.

The rate for the Communist Pathet Lao and other rebel forces is not known.

The total military strength of the two sides may be 40,000 or more, but this does not mean they all are on the battle lines. A substantial proportion of the Laos forces are in garrisoning areas not yet under rebel attack.

Seek Solution To Laos At Emergency Session

KEY WEST, Fla. (AP)—President Kennedy and British Prime Minister Harold Macmillan agreed Sunday fighting in Laos must stop and called on Russia to accept a cease-fire proposal.

A hastily arranged conference brought the two heads of government together for the first time. At the end of the historic session they presented a united front to a world worried lest civil strife in the little southeastern Asian kingdom spark an East-West war. First, they agreed "the situation in Laos cannot be allowed to continue to deteriorate."

Then they said the road to peace lies in British proposals for a truce to be arranged by the already-existing international control commission made up of India, Canada and Poland.

Finally, their joint communiqué concluded: "They strongly hope, therefore, that the Soviet Union will make a positive and constructive reply to these proposals."

Force Not Mentioned
Use of force was not mentioned in their bid for a diplomatic settlement of the war between the West-supported royal Laotian government and the Communist-led rebels who are threatening to overrun the little country.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, declined to say whether there was any discussion of agreement on joint military action if diplomatic maneuvers fail to restore peace and establish Laos as an independent, neutral nation.

Kennedy and Macmillan met for nearly 3½ hours at the naval base at Key West, in a room looking out over the sea. A submarine and a submarine tender were anchored a few feet away. Afterward they issued this communiqué through Salinger and Harold Evans, Macmillan's press secretary:

"President Kennedy and Prime Minister Macmillan have had a most valuable exchange of views about the situation in Laos. This will be of great assistance to the representatives of their two countries in the discussions at the SEATO meeting which is due to begin in Bangkok tomorrow. "They agreed that the situation in Laos cannot be allowed to continue to deteriorate."

Other Agreement

"They also agreed that the recent British note to the Soviet Union contains proposals which if implemented, would bring to an end the warfare in Laos, and would pave the way for Laos to become the truly neutral country which it is their joint wish to see. "They strongly hope, therefore, that the Soviet Union will make a positive and constructive reply to these proposals."

That reply could come Monday at a meeting already arranged between Kennedy and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, at the White House in Washington. There was no assurance that that was the purpose for which Gromyko sought the meeting, although diplomats said the question of Laos almost certainly would come up.

The Soviet Union holds the key to whether a cease-fire can be arranged in Laos, where the Soviet-supplied rebels have penetrated deeply into the strategically placed country.

First Meeting
A note the British sent to the Kremlin Wednesday proposed a cease-fire, to be followed by re-establishment of an international commission to police it and a call for an international conference to agree on permanent terms.

Evans was asked if the British have received any indication when there will be a reply from the Soviet Union.

"No," he said. "We have stressed that we would like to have it early."

The Kennedy-Macmillan meeting was the first ever between the two men.

Pravda Urges Talks On Laos

LONDON (AP)—The Soviet Communist newspaper Pravda Monday urged the calling of an international conference to settle the Laotian situation.

"The U.S.S.R. has for a long time consistently proposed measures to regularize the situation in Laos by talks," the paper said.

The newspaper comments were broadcast by Moscow Radio.

"The Soviet government considers it necessary urgently to call an international conference to regularize the Laotian problem. It would be expedient to call a conference of the representatives of the countries which took part in the Geneva conference of 1954, including the U.S.A. and certain other directly interested countries."

The article made no mention of a cease-fire in the strife-torn Asian kingdom—a condition Britain made in accepting, with American backing, the Soviet Union's earlier demand for an international parity.

The newspaper said: "The people are awaiting immediate action to bring about the cessation as quickly as possible of the military intervention of the SEATO countries in the internal affairs of the Laotian people."

The article commented on President Kennedy's White House news conference statement last Thursday and said it could not agree with his explanation of the Laotian situation.

"The President nowhere mentions that a lawful government headed by Souvanna Phouma exists in Laos against which a rebellion inspired from outside has been raised. Nothing was said either about the fact that the U.S.A. has interfered in the internal affairs of Laos, and is sending weapons and military advisers there."

"The well-known fact that gangs of Chiang-Kai-Shek followers kept by the U.S.A. have been sent to Laos is also passed over in silence."

Pravda said if the United States wants a neutral and independent Laos "it should not do anything that might lead to extending the military conflict there, Thailand must not be a clearing house for supplies for the rebel forces, the American military advisers must leave Laos, and together with other interested countries the U.S.A. must urgently take its place at a round-table international conference."

Centennial Unit Opposes Compromise

SOUTH BOSTON, Va. (AP)—The chairman of the National Civil War Centennial Commission's Executive Committee said Sunday he is opposed to a compromise decision changing the meeting place of the organization's national assembly to the Charleston, S. C., naval station.

The change was made "to meet the demands of the President," said Rep. William M. Tucker, D-Va. "I do not acquiesce in this action."

Retired Maj. Gen. U. S. Grant III, commission chairman and grandson of the Civil War general, announced Saturday the April 11-12 assembly will be held at the naval station to avoid racial barriers in the city.

He said in Washington the change was in compliance with President Kennedy's antidiscrimination policies. About 200 to 300 persons are expected to attend a luncheon, dinner and business sessions of the group.

Four state commissions—New Jersey, New York, California and Illinois—had withdrawn from the meeting because of segregation policies in Charleston. A spokesman for the New York group said later his organization had no funds and hadn't planned to attend anyway.

Sweepstakes Winners Can't Believe It's True

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Feelings from shocked disbelief to exuberance were expressed by Pennsylvanians who held winning Irish Sweepstakes tickets Saturday.

"You don't mean it; you're kidding," Mrs. Verne Gates of R.D. 1, Snedekerville in Bedford County gasped, when told of her fortune over the telephone. Her husband bought the ticket for $3 in Elmira, N.Y., where he works in a factory.

Gates' ticket is worth about $140,000, say officials. He said he plans to pay some debts and then bank the rest.

The Gateses have a 12-year-old daughter, Peggy Ann.

"I've never had such a day in my life," said Mrs. Jane Sabia of Dunmore, Pa., a Scranton suburb. The ticket her husband Tony, holds is worth $140,000. He shared the ticket with his brother and sister-in-law Bill and Bert Sabia, of Rochester, N.Y.

Sabia said he has not received official word of the winning, and added "I'm not going to spend it until I get it." He drives a truck, and his wife works in a dress factory. They have no children. The Rochester couple are expecting their first child in May.

Lenten Meditation

Holy Week Meditation
VERILY I say unto thee, To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise. (Luke 23:43.)

In the film "John Wesley," one of the most touching scenes takes place on the death wagon. There Wesley tells a condemned criminal of the penitent thief on the cross and of Jesus' promise to him.

The criminal, in a similar situation, puts faith in Christ and commits his life to His care. He prays, as did the penitent thief, "Lord, remember me." His face lights up with joy as he experiences God's forgiving and saving grace. He dies in peace.

Did these men deserve such kind treatment? What had they done to merit a place in paradise? Their salvation was the result of the pure, unselfish love of Jesus Christ.

It is the same with us. We are sinners. We cannot earn salvation from sin. We do not merit heaven. Yet Jesus offers salvation from sin and a home in heaven to us in response to our simple trust in Him.

Prayer: Dear Father, grant us thankful hearts for salvation from sin and hope of heaven—expressions of Thy overflowing and never-ceasing love. Use us to share this good news with others. In the Master's name Amen.

Thought for the day: "By grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God."

Dear Abby

Quit The Ring, Lady

Dear Abby: I am married to a man who has a very ugly temper. The first time he hit me we had been married only three weeks, and I was four months pregnant at the time.

His father used to beat his mother up so bad she would land in the hospital. He has a brother who slaps his wife around, too. Is this a sickness that runs in their family? I never thought I could put up with the beatings I have taken (and over absolutely nothing). I don't want to raise our three children in a fatherless home, but what is a wife supposed to do when she is afraid to open her mouth for fear she'll get her teeth knocked out?

LIVING IN FEAR Dear Living: (This is living?) No man's worth more than one sock, and few are worth that. Let him send the support checks in the mail. If there is anything worse than a fatherless home, it's a home ruled by a coward who punches women.

Dear Abby: I have a friend

Jobless Dole Extended For 70 Persons

THE NEW federal program extending payments to unemployed workers who have exhausted their benefits under the Pennsylvania Unemployment Compensation Law will affect 70 area people, the State Employment Service office in Stroudsburg reported yesterday.

John P. Dougherty, local manager, said 225 unemployed workers eventually will be eligible for additional benefits. Payments average $32 per week, he added.

"We have one of the lowest percentages of unemployment in the state," Dougherty said. "There have been no long periods of unemployment, just seasonal layoffs," the manager explained.

The new Federal law covers unemployed workers who exhausted their benefit rights after June 30, 1960, and covered workers who may exhaust their state benefit rights and file under the federal program before April 1, 1962. The program expires June 30, 1962 and payments will not be made after that date.

To be eligible for additional benefits, an unemployed worker must have exhausted his right to unemployment compensation under the state or the federal laws providing unemployment compensation for veterans and federal employees. All of the usual requirements of the state law relating to eligibility for benefits will be applied.

Begin Next Month

Benefits are payable, Dougherty said, for weeks of unemployment beginning April 8 or later. He added that no benefits would be paid for unemployment prior to that date under the new law even though the unemployed worker had exhausted his unemployment rights several months ago. In general, a worker who drew 30 weeks of benefits would be eligible for nine additional weeks of benefits under the Federal program.

"The purpose of this program is to provide an income to workers who have drawn all the unemployment compensation benefits to which they are normally entitled and who are still unemployed," Dougherty said. Workers who think they may be eligible for additional benefits should go to the local State Bureau of Employment Security office at 408 Main St., Stroudsburg, in accordance with a schedule which will be announced by the local office within the next few days.

It is important, however, that prospective claimants bear in mind that they must have exhausted all benefit rights under any unemployment insurance law, must be still unemployed, available for work and able to meet the eligibility requirements of the Temporary Extended Unemployment Compensation Law. This nationwide program will be financed through a temporary

Television Set Traps 2 Men Charged With Easton Theft

BECAUSE two thieves didn't know what model television sets a large chain store sells, they were trapped into admitting a Palmer Twp. burglary to Stroudsburg and State Police Saturday morning.

The two men, William Lansche, 42, and Craig Folkner, 22 both of Easton, are being held in the Palmer Twp. jail after admitting to Patrolman of pennies and jewelry in their room, when she cleaned it.

The maid, Mrs. Audrey Miller Barr, told the owner of the hotel, Boyd Weiss, Sr., who notified the police.

The hotel became suspicious of the two men when they checked into the hotel Friday night with a TV set, some paper bags and no other luggage.

Kern and Decker questioned the men, who told them they won the pennies in a poker game and had bought the TV set at an Easton department store. The men had registered under false names at the hotel.

Decker checked the Easton department store, while Kern contacted Easton police to see if any robbery might have involved small change, jewelry and a TV set.

Easton police said Gatto had reported similar articles stolen from his home Friday.

Gatto told Easton police that he had received a phone call from a man who said he was an Easton police officer, asking Gatto, who owned a novelty shop, to come to the shop to see if a broken window there might have been part of a burglary plan.

While Gatto was gone, his home was broken into and $50 in half-dollars, $60 in quarters, $30 in dimes and $124 in nickels and pennies were taken, along with a TV set and some jewelry. The phone call turned out to be a hoax.

The Easton department store told Decker that it did not sell the type of set supposedly bought there.

Decker and Kern returned for another round of questioning with Lansche and Folkner.

When Decker told them that the store did not sell the TV model and Kern mentioned the Gatto burglary, Lansche and Folkner confessed.

Lansche and Folkner were turned over to Palmer Twp. police.

Scouts Saved Lives, Honored By Council

TWO area scouts were named to receive national honors, the Delaware Valley Area Boy Scout Council said at the close of its two-day weekend conference at Buck Hill Falls.

The disclosure was made by Charles Whitlow, chairman of the Advancement Committee.

Those selected for national recognition were Boy Scout William A. Miller of Troop 11, Easton, and Cub Scout Bruce Siegel of Cub Pack 44 of Nazareth.

Troop 11 is sponsored by St. Paul's Evangelical Lutheran Church, Easton and Cub Pack 44 is sponsored by Bushkill Parent Teachers Assn.

Miller was singled out for risking his life in saving that of his two-year nephew, David Miller, Jr., when their boat struck a reef and capsized a short distance above Easton on June 26, 1960. Miller, his uncle David Miller and the younger Miller were riding the boat when it struck the reef.

The younger boy fell into the river. His father made a vain search for him and became exhausted. Scout Miller continued the search, located the boy and brought him to safety.

The other winner was Cub Scout Siegel who heard cries of help from a sewer pipe and found 16-year-old Harold Garron inside with his foot entangled in wire and his neck wedged atop the pipe with a bicycle rim choking him. Siegel, after working feverishly, was able to free the youth.

Official presentations of the awards will be made at a later date, Whitlow reported.

In other business, the council held charter review on Friday night with A. F. Snyder, of Athens, president of the Gene Sullivan Council Boy Scouts and regional committeeman. He was assisted by Irwin C. Scullin of Philadelphia, deputy regional executive.

Forty-five representatives from the Delaware Valley Council attended the program. Carl W. Weit of Easton, council president, presided.

On Saturday, the session consisted of operating committee meetings in which activities for the coming year were outlined. Also under discussion were ways to gain more voluntary manpower.

A panel discussion was held with Robert Wilson of Barrett and Frederick W. Druse. Druse spoke on "Strengthening Units Through Commissioner Service."

Walter Puts Question To Rival Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Francis E. Walter has asked the American Civil Liberties Union whether it believes persons under Communist party influence should be allowed to teach in U.S. schools and colleges.

Walter is chairman of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

Recently the ACLU issued a statement signed by 250 college and university professors, urging abolition of the committee, saying it has "repeatedly undermined the freedoms essential for national well-being," and "continues to abridge citizens' rights of free speech and association."

Walter wrote to Patrick Malin, executive director of ACLU, saying he found the statement "vague on a question that is vital to its presentation of the alleged case against this committee."

He then asked for a copy on any position the ACLU may have taken on that question of persons under Communist influence teaching.

Postal Costs

Postal scientists are right back where they were six million dollars ago. The electronic mail sorter in the Providence post office turns out to be no match for the human eye, hand and brain.

And the scheme for coast-to-coast instant mail by facsimile has turned out to be no match for the telegraph lobby.

The cost of these unsuccessful experiments will no doubt be aired in public hearing when the new administration makes its scheduled bid for a good material for oratory, but lose significance when compared with this year's predicted $897 million post office deficit and a predicted deficit of 900 million next year.

Congress seems resigned to live with postal deficits, as indicated by its rejection of five of the Eisenhower administrations' seven requests to put the service on a break-even basis. Mr. Kennedy's administration is not likely to change this political tradition easily.

The reluctance of Congress to close the post office money gap by raising prices invites more effort to trim costs. That's what the Providence experiment, particularly, was all about, and its failure should not be made an obstacle to further research in this area.

Opinions Of Other Editors

To Legislate Unemployment

Debate in the House of Representatives on the minimum wage bill spotlights a contradiction in avowed aims of the Kennedy administration. Is it primarily interested in reducing unemployment and does it intend to try to restrain the wage-price spiral or does it seek political reward for ostensibly raising wages?

An economist of the AFL-CIO has presented a survey of 13 states which in the last few years have raised their legal minimums for retail store employment to $1 an hour. This purports to show that such employment has not suffered but often increased.

Yet if allowance is made for cyclical business trends, the stability of retailing as compared with manufacturing and the general increase of service employment, the report is unconvincing.

More to the point in the immediate business circumstances seems a survey of the specific types of store affected by an increase which went into effect in Pennsylvania in January, this year. It indicates that a year-long decline in employment of 2 or 3 per cent was turned into a 6 per cent drop in three weeks.

There is a persuasive case to be made for bringing somewhere between one and four million workers under the present $1 an hour federal minimum who are not now covered by it.

But it is difficult to see how the present minimum can be raised to $1.15 within four months, as proposed, without impairing job opportunities for many of five million now out of work, especially the unskilled, the young and the elderly.

If it be argued that the administration wishes to increase the buying power in circulation, let the question be asked: Is there any more buying power in a wage of $1.15 that you don't get than in a wage of $1 that you don't get? —Christian Science Monitor

Portuguese Colonies

The final result of World War II will be the destruction of the great empires of the 18th and 19th centuries — the Dutch, French, British and Portuguese — and the establishment of four new empires: the Soviet Universal State, the Marxist Sinic Empire, the Moslem Empire and the Marxist Latin American Confederation. This is the trend in the year 1961.

the Marxist Sinic Empire, the Moslem Empire and the Marxist Latin American Confederation. This is the trend in the year 1961.

That Portugal is placed in this grouping may surprise those who do not realize that Portugal, the first of the explorers, retained a number of colonies and that whereas Portugal lost its greatest colony, Brazil, the ties between the two countries have held firm.

Portugal's colonial empire developed as a result of the great explorations under Prince Henry the Navigator (1394-1460). The Portuguese Empire started in 1415 when Ceuta was taken from the Moors, thus establishing a European foothold on the mainland of Africa. In 1463, the Portuguese captured Casablanca and in 1471, Tangier. Thus, Portugal became an African power.

To go back to Henry the Navigator, who was partly English on his mother's side, he was general of the Order of Christ, a wealthy, crusading order. He diverted its funds and its enthusiasms to science and exploration.

His work was monumental. The discovery of the Azores brought Portugal farther west in the Atlantic. By the Treaty of Alcanovas (1480) Portugal came into possession of West Africa, Guinea, and the islands of the Atlantic Ocean.

The Portuguese, throughout the 15th century, continued to explore the West African coast and move up the rivers which they encountered. Portugal became rich because of these discoveries and sent out land expeditions as well, hoping to find a land route to Ethiopia and to India by which they could bypass the rapidly rising Moslems. It was Vasco da Gama (1469) who finally moved on to India, taking advantage of the prior knowledge of other Portuguese explorers. He rounded the Cape of Good Hope and sailed on toward the Malabar Coast of India. He was followed in 1500 by Cabral who sailed with 13 ships to establish trade between Portugal and the East.

In 1557, they took the island of Macao, near Hongkong and Canton, establishing a trading center with China which still flourishes to this day.

In 1500, Cabral sailed to India by way of the Cape Verde Islands. He landed in Brazil where he stayed 10 days but took possession of the country. The Portuguese held Brazil until 1822 when it became independent. Brazil remained spiritually related to Portugal, the language of which continues to be spoken in that country.

The Portuguese acquired Goa in India which became the center of their activities in that part of the world. Whereas the British and the French have been forced out of India, the Portuguese remain in possession of Goa which they have refused to give up.

The Portuguese have never regarded their African and Asiatic holdings as colonies. They have called them Overseas Provinces. The Portuguese intermarried with the natives and lived comfortably among them. There has been no revolt against the Portuguese in Macao or Goa but in Angola, in Africa, such a revolt is being stirred up.

Portugal has no intention of giving up any of its territory anywhere. Just as Cuba has been spreading its particular form of Marxism throughout Latin America, so the Left Wing Congolese are moving into Angola to drive the Portuguese out. It is part of a universal conspiracy to take over all the weak spots of the Earth in the interest of Marxism.

Portugal will fight back. It will fight for Timor, Macao, Goa, Angola, for every small island it possesses. Its weapon will be to retire from the United Nations which means that it will withdraw from the Western defensive union, leaving the United States without important bases.

If the United States can afford to forego its strategic bases in Portugal and Spain, then the Portuguese attitude does not matter. If, on the other hand, these bases are worth the enormous sums of the American taxpayers' money that has been expended on them, then the American policy toward Portugal cannot be what it has been toward the Netherlands and Great Britain.

We helped put the Dutch out of Indonesia which is now favorable to Soviet Russia. We helped put the French out of French Indo-China, where a war is now being waged against Red China. Do we know what we are doing?

The Pennsylvania Story

High Shuffle

By Mason Denison
Harrisburg — This is the somewhat interesting case of a piece of legislation that got the high shuffle — and what will happen to it now no one knows. It is a curious case from several aspects.

In the closing hours of legislative sessions last week a bill was on the final reading calendar in the House of Representatives that would have removed from the hands of superintendents of state mental institutions the right to appoint institutional employees.

Rather, the authority would be placed in the hands of the board of trustees of the institution — as it was prior to 1957 when the then Leader Administration fought for and managed to have passed legislation stripping local mental hospital boards of their administrative power and authority.

Such boards became advisory in nature only. This they are today.

The legislation that reached the third and final reading calendar in the House last week would not have returned the mental hospital boards to an administrative status — that is, given them the right to run the institution outright as they did once.

Instead it would only have given the boards the right to appoint or approve personnel to be employed at the institution concerned.

Here is the interesting part incident: A piece of legislation in either the House or Senate must be on the calendar — that is, presented in bill form before the chamber considering it—before it can be voted on for final passage by that chamber.

Such was the case with this bill — HB 297. Yet it went through two readings in the House and was suddenly flagged down on third and final reading.

It was reported that the reason given was that the bill would return Pennsylvania's mental hospitals to "the old political patronage grab system" insofar as hospital employees were concerned.

Would it — or wouldn't it? There is much about it: As matters stand at present, the Governor can pick up the telephone, call the individual hospital superintendent and direct this or that employee be fired or hired; or he can call the Secretary of Public Welfare and request the same thing via the intermediary method; or simplified even more, the political patronage representative of the administration (whether this or any administration) could do the same thing.

Should the hospital superintendent refuse — dismissal could just as easily be the order of the day.

With a board of trustees handling the chore as an administrative function — the board could tell the governor or the Secretary of Public Welfare to go jump in the river, as used to be the case prior to 1957 incidentally.

The Governor could either jump in the river — or fire the board and create an obvious public odor, which also used to happen on occasion prior to 1957.

Significantly, HB 297 got the high shuffle as it came up for third reading — back to committee for burial — when it was suddenly realized that the bill (a) was not an administration bill, and (b) was opposed by the administration.

As a sidenote, of more than passing interest perhaps is the fact that the ten state-owned general hospitals (also under the jurisdiction of the Department of Public Welfare) are run by administrative boards of trustees — as well as Pennsylvania's 14 state (teachers) colleges. The boards run the show completely, including the employee phase.

Obviously, it's somewhat easier to tell one person what to do — than to try to persuade nine individual personalities!

The Allen-Scott Report

Polaris Fleet Grows

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — The Navy's steadily growing fleet of nuclear submarines armed with nuclear-tipped ballistic missiles is now playing a crucial role in this country's foreign policy.

This increasingly devastating underwater armada is the real reason President Kennedy postponed resuming disarmament discussions with Russia until August.

By then he will be in a much better position to "negotiate from strength" than now.

In August the U.S. will have six Polaris submarines either on "battle station" off the Soviet coast, or readily available for that. Each will be armed with 16 of these solid-fuel ballistic missiles capable of hurting nuclear warheads from 900 to 2,500 miles.

Latest of these subs, the 6,900-ton Ethan Allen, is scheduled to become operational by August.

Already on "battle station" duty are the George Washington, Patrick Henry and Robert E. Lee. At the Cape Canaveral, Fla., missile center, the Theodore Roosevelt is undergoing firing tests preparatory to joining the other Polaris subs. It will be followed by the Abraham Lincoln, slated to become operational in June.

This expanding fleet of nuclear submarines armed with nuclear-tipped missiles with ranges of 900 to 2,500 miles is the most significant military development since the first Sputnik startled the world.

President Kennedy intends to make the most of this powerful factor militarily and in negotiating with Russia.

What's coming — In his forthcoming request to Congress for additional defense funds above the amount proposed by President Eisenhower, he will ask for $900 million for five more Polaris submarines.

That would make a total of 20. The Navy wants 45 by 1963.

Also under the President's plan, production of Polaris subs will be speeded up from four a year to 12, starting in January.

To State Department and Pentagon leaders, the President is stressing the key importance of the Polaris submarine fleet in again undertaking disarmament discussions with the Soviet. He is making it clear he sought the delay in reopening those talks until the U.S., in effect, had closed the missile gap.

"Russia has nothing to match our 96-missile fleet," the President said at one White House conference. "The significance of those six operational Polaris submarines will not be lost on the Kremlin when the disarmament parley resumes. The Russians know we are rapidly developing a mighty military force they can not match for years. They will no longer be in a position to influence these negotiations with missile threats."

It is the President's belief the Soviet has exerted such impact in the past. He is convinced previous disarmament deliberations were affected by Russian missile and Sputnik superiority. "But it will be different now," he declared. "They will know they cannot destroy our nuclear striking power when we have these Polaris submarines on 'battle station' off their coast. For the first time, we really will have stalemated them, and that should open the way to coming to some understanding on this supremely vital problem."

The Navy is about to start a unique experiment.

Space czar — Vice President Lyndon Johnson, already playing a major role in the Administration, is headed for more authority and responsibilities.

He is, in effect, to be made space czar.

President Kennedy will shortly ask Congress to designate Johnson as chairman of the National Aeronautics & Space Council, with wide powers to conduct a thorough survey of this crucial field and to recommend national goals in it.

The NAS Council, created by Congress in 1958, has been dormant. It consists of the President, as chairman, the secretaries of the State and Defense Departments, the head of the Atomic Energy Commission, director of the National Aeronautics Space Administration, and three public members.

Under President Eisenhower, the Council did very little.

President Kennedy proposes to revitalize it by making Vice President Johnson the active head and empowering him to undertake a comprehensive program to formulate a national space policy.

In outlining this backstage plan in a memorandum to the council, the President stated:

"One of the earliest, most important, and yet most difficult tasks of the council should be to prepare a comprehensive set of national goals in space against which all major proposals for assignment of responsibilities, setting of time-tables, and funding requests should be measured. "Another early task for the Vice President and the council should be to conduct an inventory of facilities, personnel, and projects related to our space effort in all agencies of government and in industry and other private institutions. Only after this can we deal authoritatively with questions of duplication of efforts, construction and projects needed . . ."

About Town

—By Gene Brown

Couldn't Be Earthlings!

It may be news to scientists that a re-examination of a meteorite that fell in France 97 years ago indicates that "wherever this story fragment originated something lived," but to us, we meet living things every day who just must have come from another planet.

Bird-Watcher:

When asked how he felt to attend the dedication of his own statue, the honored man said: "Well, somehow, you begin to feel differently about pigeons."

He Said It!

A. Joseph Powers, superintendent of rules for the New Haven Railroad, said in summing up the woes of the railroad, "We're like the chambermaid in a house of ill repute—we get more than our share of the infamy, but only a very small share of the gross receipts."

And So Did He!

To destroy the Western tradition of independent thought it is not necessary to burn the books. All we have to do is leave them unread for a couple of generations.—Robert M. Hutchins, American scholar.

Our friend Dr. Fidel Castro is dismissing all students over 13 on April 15 to spend nine months teaching illiterates in the provinces. Also all normal schools will close so that the teacher can be given an "opportunity" to attend training schools in the mountains. At the end of six months they will become teachers without further training.

Translated, this means: The kids are being taken away from their parents to get military training; the teachers will be incapable of teaching more than just in a rudimentary fashion; teachers not subscribing to the opportunity will be purged. (The new official Cuban language is called "Double-Speak.")

"You told me how good you were when I hired you three months ago," said the boss to the new typist. "Now, tell me all over again. I'm getting discouraged."

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Sentimental mothers who, when their son leaves home, softly close the door of his room, leaving everything just as it is until he returns, would be baffled by Pete's, I thought as I stood in the doorway, my eyes still dazed by the dawn and the sight of his little red car vanishing down the road.

They'd also have needed to be totally deaf; he'd left the radio going full blast. It was playing some sort of bagpipe number, very appropriate for seeing a son off to war—or, more truthfully, off to Fort Sam Houston, Texas.

And how would an Army inspection rate his room now: dresser drawers half open and spilling out sweaters and stuff, the floor littered with those little white price tags that come on towels and tee shirts and things, the foot of the bed heaped with civilian clothes?

How many of these suits will he have outgrown in two years—or how many will be out-of-style, or, heaven forbid, full of moth holes? And how many of these other things will he have outgrown, in interest if not in size:

The crash helmet we'd made him buy with the motor scooter in Italy, the pile of records spilling out of the cabinet, the ski poles standing in the corner—or those dirty tennis shoes, looking somehow young and forlorn, standing there, pigeon-toed.

Certainly the magazines heaped in an untidy pyramid on his desk will be out-dated—sports cars, motor boats, sailing, jazz music—and all the rest. And what would a sentimental mother do about the nice she'd get, if she left untouched the coke bottle and bowl of apple cores on the floor by his bed?

But don't think that because it's absurd that a mother would think it was funny—not even a mother who prides herself that she has raised her children to be independent. Suddenly the most out-grown, outdated and forlorn thing in the room was me.

I switched off the radio and, in the sudden silence, the birds singing outside sounded unbearably sweet, the sunlight streaming in the window splintered into a prism of colors. I had almost forgotten how scalding tears can be.

Cantata Of 'Olivet To Calvary'

The choir of the Presbyterian Church of East Stroudsburg is presenting Maunders "Olivet to Calvary" on Wednesday night at 7:30 as part of the observance of Holy Week.

The theme of "Olivet to Calvary" recalls the scenes of the last days of the Saviour's life on Earth: the rejoicing of the multitude with hosannas and palms, the view of Jerusalem from Olivet, the lament over the city, the scene in the temple and the walk back over the Mount at night.

In the second part, the supper of the Passover leads to the Garden of Gethsemane, his betrayal, the tumult before Pilate, the passage of the cross and the climax of Calvary.

Solists for the cantata are Ann Spencer, soprano; James Anthony, tenor; and Howard Atwell, baritone. Ernest Michelfelder will be at the organ and will direct the presentation. The public is invited.

Chiffon Pie Ideal For Holiday Party

By CECILY BROWNSTONE

Associated Press Food Editor

Entertaining during the Easter holidays? This scrumptious maple-flavored chiffon pie should please your guests. We found the dessert could be made a day ahead of a party because it benefits from an overnight stay in the refrigerator while flavors combine. This is a sweet and rich dessert, so the 9-inch pie will serve eight.

Maple Chiffon Pie

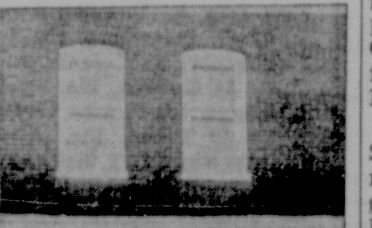

- 1 envelope unflavored gelatin
- ¼ cup cold water
- 2 eggs (separated)
- ¼ teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup maple-blended syrup
- 1 cup milk
- ½ cup heavy cream
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 baked 9-inch walnut crumb crust

Sprinkle gelatin over cold water to soften. Mix egg yolks, salt, and ¼ cup of syrup in the top of a double boiler; beat to blend. Gradually stir in milk. Place over hot water. Cook and stir until mixture coats a metal spoon. Remove from heat. Add softened gelatin and water. Chill until slightly thickened. Beat egg whites until foamy. Gradually add remaining syrup and continue beating until egg whites will form stiff peaks. Fold into the slightly thickened gelatin mixture. Whip cream and fold into maple mixture. Add vanilla. Spoon into pie shell. Chill until firm.

Walnut Crumb Crust

- 1¼ cups finely crushed vanilla-wafers
- ¼ cup chopped walnut meats
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- ¼ cup butter (melted)

Mix crumbs, nuts, and sugar. Add melted butter and mix well. Press firmly on bottom and sides of 9-inch pie plate. Bake in moderate (375 degrees) oven 5 to 8 minutes. Cool before adding Maple Filling.

The Wyckoff Shopper

The Family Store

A.B. Wyckoff

Stroudsburg, Pa.

This morning's social page of The Daily Record, has two pictures of the models in our Wyckoff fashion show at Tobyhanna Depot, and we are grateful to the public relations man and his photographer John Mielicki for the generous attention given us. One of the models not pictured was Kate Mullins, who represented Wyckoff's and, as I've previously mentioned, showed how costumes can be dressed up or down by the simple addition or subtraction of accessories.

One of Kate's most attractive dresses was a simple basic made from a 45 x 52 Madras tablecloth in soft shades of blue, pink, and green. I mention this again because it is a very simple, inexpensive garment to make, the tablecloth having been only 2.98 in our domestic department, and the pattern being Simplicity's Number 3780. This pattern, available in our pattern department, calls for a back zipper and draw string at the waistline, but Kate has eliminated these. Hers simply hangs loose, and slightly slashed at the neckline in back where it closed with a button.

On her first appearance she wore it with a tailored self-belt. Later she accessorized it with a pale yellow, soft calf tie belt, and matching accessories. Another time she wore a pink belt and pale pink stretch gloves which she had found among our anniversary specials. A band of fabric from the dress was used around her navy hat of rough straw.

Kate likes this pattern so much, and finds it so easy to change completely with accessories, she is having it made up also in black and white shantung. Like all smart women she has long since learned the charm of a cleverly tied scarf . . . an interestingly designed handbag . . . a subtle use of the basic fabric.

Which reminds me that Jeanne Miller, the very clever and attractive fashion coordinator of Summerettes, told me on her recent visit to our store, that many women will snip a narrow length of material from the seam of a favorite casual dress or coordinated ensemble, and stitch it into a tailored bow to wear on their little fabric shoes. It's an idea that costs nothing, and is worth its weight in fashion gold.

I felt I was very thrifty last winter when I had only four dresses in my wardrobe—certainly not enough when one goes to business every day. Thus far this Spring I have two dresses—one a navy Cupioni which I wear at work and will be able, thanks to its styling, to wear the better part of next fall and winter; and a sheer jacket dress which the store wanted me to wear for fashion shows.

This 17.98 dress is nice for several reasons: it has sheath lines and short sleeves, which make it a very practical basic. It has a satin cummerbund to dress it up, a tailored self-belt to tone it down, and the jacket to change its appearance. On its first appearance, I wore it with a towering flowered hat of jacqueline pink, matching "Long-Stemmed Beauty" pin on my lapel, and white gloves. On its second appearance I wore it with yellow beads, earrings, and wheat colored gloves, later, with a yellow-trimmed orange cloche, I wore the same yellow jewelry and white gloves. Last week at Tobyhanna the dress appeared again, but the jewelry was turquoise to match one of the figures in my navy straw hat with silk print crown. Next time it will have a rose crowned hat and probably matching jewelry with white gloves.

Juggling things around as I do, and rather priding myself on spending very little for clothes, it always annoys me when friends remark, "My gosh, Madalyn—ANOTHER new dress?" Frankly, half the fun of fashion is in accessories.

Cora Alberson's department (first floor budget cottons) is now showing three delightful culottes—one a knee tickler, the other two in dress lengths. The knee tickler (just above the knee length) is square necked and sleeveless, in jacqueline pink sashed with a giddy stripe of yellow, blue, green, black and orange. It also comes in blue and yellow, sizes 8 to 18, at 5.98. Another, in orchid or blue with white spatter dots, has puffed sleeves elasticized at the shoulder, a completely bare neckline, and a solid color sash. This is 3.98, as is Faithful Frocks' culotte in geometric print, blue or brown predominating. The last two come in sizes 12 to 20 and in half-sizes—one 14½-22½, the other 14½-24½. Cute, cool, culottes!

National Grid Group Here Tonight

THE National Football Foundation meets with a group of local football fans tonight at the Penn-Stroud at 6:30 to discuss the formation of a local chapter of the NFF.

Harvey Harman, executive director of the Football Hall of Fame, and former Rutgers University football coach, will address the group, along with John Quigg of Bethlehem, State Director of the NFF.

Harman is a past president of the American Football Coaches Association.

If tonight's meeting is successful, it may not be too long before the Pocono has a chapter of the national group.

The Ohio State University Monthly, the Buckeyes' alumni magazine, gives a great deal of credit to Ted Williams, Michigan State center and former Stroud Union High School hooper.

Ohio State Magazine Praises Williams

In talking about the 83-68 victory the Bucs scored over Michigan State in the first meeting of the two teams this year and the 48 points Lucas scored (a Big Ten record at the time) the magazine says: "Ohio State strategy of looking for tall Jerry Lucas whenever the defense tied them up was effective. Spartan center Ted Williams fouled out trying to stop Lucas and without him Michigan State was almost helpless."

King's College of Wilkes-Barre will play an eight-game football schedule this season. Except for the University of Scranton, which dropped football a month ago, King's will have the same schedule as last year.

Could there be an opening for East Stroudsburg State College?

Pleasant Valley Enters Black Diamond

Pleasant Valley High School has decided to enter the Black Diamond League and forget about the Lehigh-Northampton set-up. The Bears will be accepted into the Black Diamond, April 6.

And the football team at Pleasant Valley will play eight football games this season. However, they will be only junior varsity games. The school will field a varsity team in two years.

The Pocono Mountain Joint School will conduct the same type of football program.

Player Wins Sun Event With 273

By WHITNEY MARTIN

Associated Press Sports Writer

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) —

Gary Player, "the guy in the little red pants" won the $25,000 Sunshine Open Golf Tournament Sunday with a 72-hole score of 273, one stroke in front of Arnold Palmer.

Player, stocky South African with flaming red trousers and a white cap that nearly hit his ears, won it the hard way. Needing a bird on the final hole, a 488-yard par 5, he put his second in a yawning trap 120 feet from the pin. He blasted out to five feet of the cup, sank the putt—the last of the tournament—and sailed his cap into the crowd.

Palmer, who had started the day at 208, four strokes behind Player, Julius Boros and Gay Brewer Jr., made one of his usual charges down the stretch. He carded a 6-under-par 66 over the 6,632-yard par 36-36 Bayshore layout as Player took a 68.

Palmer also birdied the final hole, nearly holing a 40-foot chip shot for an eagle and forcing Player to make his clutch shot.

Mike Souchak, also starting the day at 208, had a 67 to finish alone in third place at 275, as Boros took a par 72 and tied with Dave Ragan and Brewer at 276. Ragan had a 65, best round of the day, and Brewer matched Boros' 72.

Player said he knew how his opposition stood, and particularly Palmer, all the way around. "He was attacking and I was defending, you know," the chunky intense Johannesburg, South Africa golfer said.

KANSAS CITY (AP) — "No all-Americans, just a bunch of great defenders, shooters and hustlers. And of them all, it was our defense—our defense."

The speaker is new Coach Ed Jucker, the 43-year-old bantam who stepped in from his assistant's job when George Smith became athletic director.

Nanticoke Wins PLAA

Board Strength Beat Us Says Hickory Twp. Coach

By FRED WALTERS

HARRISBURG (AP) — "They outplayed us on the boards, out-shot us and they played steady ball. That's why they're the state champions."

That comment by coach Francis Webster of Hickory Twp. tells as well as anything how the top prize in Pennsylvania scholastic sports wound up in Nanticoke for the first time in 35 years.

The Nans, coached by Sylvester (Sy) Bozinski, whipped Webster's Hornets, 56-46, Saturday night at the Farm Show Arena here before 8,841 spectators to win the PLAA Class A state basketball championship.

Bozinski, carried triumphantly off the floor by his team and fans, attributed the victory to board control, mobility and deadly accuracy when it counted.

First Score

The Nans scored first, were tied, then scored again and were never headed. And, although they blew hot and cold, there never seemed to be serious doubt that they were the masters of the District 10 champions.

Nanticoke had a devastating one-two punch in Ken Legins, 6-foot-4 senior, and Bill James, 6-foot-2 senior and co-captain.

But it also had coolness and, as Webster lamented, "They just refused to be rattled."

Legins Deceys

The Hornets were geared to stop Legins, the Nans high-scoring all-state candidate. They couldn't stop James, who wound up the night with 19 points, to take scoring honors, and 12 rebounds, to top that department, also. Legins had 16 points (10 in the first quarter) but was used largely as a decoy.

Playing a man-to-man defense designed to collapse on Legins whenever the play went toward the big man, the Hornets time and again left a channel open for a drive in for the basket.

James ran that channel for 11 points (including a foul shot) in the fourth quarter as the

Walter To Preside At Debate On Wage Bill

By FRANCIS E. WALTER
15th District Congressman
WASHINGTON — Minimum wage debates continue this week in the House of Representatives, which during the past week kept up a steady pace with committee action on the floor.

Your congressman has been selected by Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn to preside throughout the debates on minimum wage legislation.

An indication of how fast a pace the House of Representatives is setting, your congressman has noted that 154 public bills, 27 private bills, and 27 resolutions were introduced between Tuesday and Friday.

The largest batch of proposed legislation came Thursday when 75 public bills, 38 private bills, and 41 resolutions were dropped into the hopper.

Two public bills were introduced by your congressman last Tuesday, one of which would amend the Subversive Activities Control Act of 1950 so as to require the registration of certain additional persons disseminating political propaganda within the United States as agents of a foreign principal.

The second bill would amend a section of the United States

Code so as to require the concurrence of not less than five justices in the granting of writs of certiorari by the Supreme Court.

Judgeship Bill — The House Judiciary Committee has approved the judgeship bill, calling for the appointment of 70 additional judges throughout the country.

Your congressman's proposal in H. R. 191, which he introduced on the opening day of the 87th Congress, is included in the approved judgeship bill.

It calls for the appointment of a judge for the Third Circuit Court of Appeals, an additional judge for the Middle District of Pennsylvania, three additional judges in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania and two additional judges in the Western District of Pennsylvania. The existing temporary judge in the Western District would be made permanent in the bill.

That would mean that eight judges from the 70 would be from Pennsylvania.

Happy For Mr. Moore — Few appointments have given me greater satisfaction than the one made this past week by Speaker Sam Rayburn when he named Hugh Moore to the NATO Commission. Mr. Moore, Chairman of the Board of the Dixie Cup Corp., is a dedicated citizen who will serve his country well in this important position.

Military Construction — The House of Representatives passed the military construction authorization bill, 411 to 0, on Thursday. Although Pennsylvania comes in for a number of projects in the bill, the 15th Congressional District will not receive any funds on this ground.

However, your congressman has been told by the National Guard Bureau at the Pentagon that the Lehigh Valley project is ready to go. The only delay is the arrival from the Pennsylvania National Guard of an approved set of plans. On learning this, your congressman contacted the Pennsylvania National Guard authorities and learned that the final plans will be submitted to the National Guard Bureau "within the next two weeks."

This assurance came from Maj. Gen. A. J. Drexel Biddle, the Adjutant General of Pennsylvania.

Jail Sentences Imposed On Two

JUSTICE of the Peace John C. F. Foelker, Stroudsburg, sentenced two men to the Monroe County Jail Saturday in default of $19 fine and costs each.

The two men, charged with disorderly conduct, are Leon Lockley, 33, of 19 N. Third St., and Russell Thompson, 22, of 554 N. Fifth St., both of Stroudsburg.

The two men were arrested by Stroudsburg Police late Friday night after they had a fight at the corner of N. Third St. and Kintner Alley.

Earl C. Delk, of 36 Lackawanna Ave., East Stroudsburg.

Delk will replace Danny Cohen, a 17-year-old senior at Easton High School and a resident of 619 Hamilton St., Easton.

Delk is studying the business education course at East Stroudsburg and is a member of the Explorer Scouts, Post 89 of Stroudsburg. He plans to report to Washington, D.C., about Monday, April 3.

Pre-School Clinics Are Scheduled

SWIFTWATER — The Pocono Mountain Joint Schools will conduct a pre-school clinic for all children eligible to enroll in the first grade in September, 1961. Those children eligible must be six years of age prior to Feb. 1, 1962.

Pre-school clinics for the Pocono and Jackson Township children will be held at the Pocono Township School, Tannersville, Monday, April 10, and Tuesday, April 11.

Others are as follows:
Tobyhanna and Tunkhannock Township children at Tobyhanna Township School on Friday, April 14.

Coolbaugh Township and Mount Pocono Borough children at the Coolbaugh Township School on Wednesday, April 19, and Thursday, April 20.

Barrett and Paradise Township children at the Barrett Township School on Monday, April 24, and Tuesday, April 25.

The child's birth certificate and record of successful vaccination, if available, will be required at the time of the pre-school clinic.

"Contact the school principal in your area if you have a child available for the above mentioned pre-school clinic," supervising Principal C. Willis Dunlap advised.

Parents of all children eligible will be notified by letter shortly after April 1, he added.

Dems Name Choices For Federal Jobs

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP)—Democratic leaders in the middle federal district of Pennsylvania reportedly have agreed on their choices for a federal judgeship and U.S. attorney for the district.

Lackawanna County leader Richard Conboy said Democratic officials of his county would ask Sen. Joseph S. Clark, D-Pa., to nominate Attorney Bernard J. Brown, 41, of Carbondale, for U.S. attorney.

The job presently is held by Daniel H. Jenkins, a Republican. The choice of Jenkins reportedly would clear the way for the selection of Michael Sheridan, of Wilkes-Barre, for the federal bench.

Births Declined In County In '60

Record Harrisburg Bureau
HARRISBURG — Monroe County births in the first nine months of last year were on the decline as compared with the same period in 1959, the State Department of Health said yesterday.

A report just completed by the department shows that the number of births in Monroe County in the first nine months of 1959 totaled 599 as compared with 575 births in the county last year at the same time.

The latest birth rate for the county stands at 19.4 per 1,000 population — down from a rate of 20.3 a year earlier.

Deaths inched upward from 284 during the period in 1959 to 295 for the past year bring the present death rate for the county to 9.9 per 1,000 population.

Leading cause of death in the county for the period was heart disease which took the lives of 116 Monroe County residents (99 during the preceding year).

Other top causes of death in the county during the period, excluding accidents and mechanical causes:
Cancer, 52 deaths (45 during 1959); cerebral hemorrhage, 39 (47); pneumonia and influenza, 15 (ten); diabetes, ten (five); general arteriosclerosis, five (five); inflammation of the kidneys, two (five), and cirrhosis of the liver, one (four).

Cresco Appeal Withdrawn

SCRANTON — An appeal from a ruling by Bankruptcy Referee Thomas C. Gibbons which permitted the sheriff's sale of a Cresco hotel for $30,000 has been withdrawn in federal court.

Attorney Joseph Murphy, representing Geraldine A. Carey, of Dunmore, former owner of the hotel, informed Chief U.S. Judge John W. Murphy that he was withdrawing the appeal.

However, the schedule of distribution of the money raised by the sale of Don Carey's Cliff View House will remain open to exceptions for 10 days following the today filing of the distribution schedule by the Monroe County sheriff's office.

The schedule of distribution, as advertised, would leave Mrs. Carey with $3,489.95 after settlement of all claims of record.

The sheriff's sale stemmed from a foreclosure move on the part of Lida I. Van Dyne, Cresco, who held at $16,000 second mortgage on the property.

After the death of her husband, Mrs. Carey operated the hotel for a time. Then she filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The sale of the hotel was held up for a time by a temporary order from Judge Murphy, but this was vacated by Referee Gibbons.
